

How to design for Riso

Our risograph works with a resolution of 600dpi (dots per inch). So when preparing your artwork please make it high-res at least 300dpi, or as a 'print-quality' PDF. We print up to A3 with 8mm margins – our maximum printable area is about 405mm x 280mm.

A second, or third colour, will not always line up exactly with the first colour. This quirky 1-2mm variation is called misregistration. It is not hard to create 'Riso-friendly' designs where registration is not crucial – as shown in this leaflet.

2-colour printing (like this) can be very effective.

Tinted boxes can help to emphasise key points.

Please avoid designing with large blocks of dark tone - they often go speckled and often prevent the paper coming off the ink drum, causing paper jams. As our inks do not contain solvents they take a few hours to fully dry. If your job is urgent and 2+ colour, please talk to us.

Riso is not great for subtle tones and gradients. Riso loves bold graphics and photos with strong contrast. If in doubt please get in touch - show us your artwork.

Why Riso printing is so great:

- Risograph uses recycle-able paper plates.
- It is very energy efficient: risograph uses just a sixth of the energy of the average digital.
- Riso inks are non-toxic and made from vegetable oils, and are permanent when dry.
- Risograph is very cost effective, especially for larger print runs.
